

KEYNOTE LECTURE

JOHN DURHAM PETERS

Case Studies in the Mediation of the Weather

It is obvious that the global climate crisis is a media phenomenon. Not only in terms of traditional news media, but in the deep ways in which nature is mediated by techniques and technologies. This talk will examine a few cases, drawn from diverse eras and media, to illustrate the predicament we face in trying to understand things as mysterious as weather and climate.